An Aversion.
I'd rather have a man come out
And tell his feelin's square,
Than go to talkin' round about
With an indulgent air
An' say: "Oh, yes, your friend'il cut
A wider swath than most,
He's well above the average. But—
An' then you get the "roast." I hate to see that man come 'round I wish that he'd keep still. In everything he's said I've found A sugar-coated pill. An' after this, I'll let him strut An' have his haughty say, I'll listen till he gets to "But," An' then I'll run away, -Washington Star.

THEIR VALENTINES.

"I tell you, Dick, this is a good one and just hits the mark exactly, verses and ail THE COQUETTE.

"You think yourself a gay coquette;
To win each heart you try;
A crooked stick at last you'll get,
Or else a maid you'll die,
For though you'll make your silly boasts
And show the hearts you've caught,
They'll all belong to shallow dudes,
Whose brains were reckoned naught."
"That's good. That's first rate. Let's see it again," exclaimed Dick, reaching across the table.

The valentine was handed across. It was an absurd picture of a simpering maiden carrying a string of large red hearts on one finger and wearing one—the latest conquest, of course—at her throat. Dick looked at it carrying a string of large red hearts on one finger and wearing one—the latest conquest, of course—at her throat. Dick looked at it enviously.

"Mine isn't as good as that," he said. "I've got to cut off the verse. It don't fit." "No," said Joe, "you couldn't send that, even if they did treat us as mean as dirt. The picture is all right, though, and that fellow looks like Canly, too."

The second valentine in question was another absurd girl in street costume making eyes at an over barbered and large-plaided gentleman in the distance, and was labeled. "The Giddy Girl and the Masher."

"Won't Nell be wild when she sees that?" said Dick, with evil triumph in his eyes. "Bess, too," asserted Joe. "Do you s'pose they'll know who sent them?"

"I'd on't either," choed Joe. But both boys took care to print the names rudely on the cheap yellow envelopes, for their handwriting was too well known.

Dick Travis, Joe King, Nell Cassidy and Bessie Brown had been schoolmates and good friends a long time. They were all about the same age, not far on either side of 16, and they lived in a country town where prayer meeting and Sunday evening services are faithfully attended by the "girls" and where the "boys" are always at hand, for the benediction, at least, and to "see the girls home." It had become such a regular thing for Dick and Joe to be in waiting at the door for Nell and Bess that the regular formula of "Can I see you home tonight?" had long since been dropped entirely, and each boy merely stepped out of the line that always formed and stood waiting in the cuter dark and offered his arm.

There was a shock in readiness for them, therefore, when on the Wednesday evening before Valentine day the two boys, who waited in the line outside, saw Nell and Bess step out and take the arms of two smoothly-dressed young strangers who had also accompanied them to church the previous Sunday evening. The boys were humiliated and eager for revenge. Valentine's day was close at hand, and the shop windows were filled with vulgar and crue

Meanwhile Nell and Bess were perhaps not altogether to blame. The city boys, who were quite amused by country ways and attracted by the bright-faced girls, had accompanied them to church on Sunday, and the same evening had engaged their company home from Wednesday night prayer meeting.

On the way home, however, as their escorts spoke merrily of the two boys who had been "turned down," as they called it, the girls did feel rather guilty, but "Mr." Gregg and "Mr." Carly were so entertaining that they forgot to be very sorry for Joe and Dick, just then, and perhaps did not yet realize the full measure of their cruelty. Then the subject of valentines came up and their "company" assured them. crueity. Then the subject of valentines came up and their "company" assured them, banteringly, that they certainly would get valentines, and from their manner both Nell and Bess believed that "present company" would be the senders and that they were to expect something very nice. It is possible that "Messrs." Canly and Gregg really meant to do something of the sort at the time, but when next day they got word from home that they were to be there without fail for a Saint Valentine's party on the following evening, they started by the first following evening, they started by the fir train and thought no more of Nell and Be until several days after. Then it was to late.

The two boys were seat mates, as were also Bess and Nell. When they returned to sheir desk they found a note folded in Dick's reader. It was addressed to them both and in the stiff little formality of the third person which was considered highly proper as being authorized by the "Complete Letter Writer."

"Miss Nells Cassidy and Miss Bessie.

ing to talk about something that must be explained.

"Hawfield, Feb. 14, 18—"

The boys looked at each other and turned pale. They were invited down there to explain and apologize. Perhaps Mr. Brown and Mr. Cassidy would be on hand to assist in the matter. They stole glances across at the girls, but both of them were buried in their books. They must go, of course. If was a long, miserable afternoon. When they knocked timidly at the Cassidy door that night and were admitted they were immensely relieved to find the girls there alone. There was a chilling cloud of embarrassment over all of them, cloud of embarrassment over all of them and when Nell at last undertook to say and when Nell at last undertook to say something it was with great effort.

"I—Bess, that is, Bess and me," she began, "wanted to tell you that—thet our company was—was engaged for Wednesday night, and that's what made — that's what made it that way, and — and just look at this!" She blushed like fire and drew out one of the wretched yellow envelopes and handed it to Dick, who took it, as pale as death, trying to say something, he knew not what, while at the same moment Bess brought forth another of the saffron hued weapons and thrust it into Joe's trembling hands. As she did so she burst into tears. into Joe's trembling hands. As she did sishe burst into tears.

"That is what they sent us," she sobbed "I suppose they thought it smart and that we didn't know any better. They talked about us getting valentines, and that a what they sent!"

The boys shot a lightning glance at each ther. Bess had said "they." It was not iquette to use the third person except on the Like a flash the truth dawned upon "It was a mean trick!" blurted out Joe hey restrained themselves.

"Do you think we ought to tell the Bar-ows, where they visited?" asked Bess.
"Not for the world!" said Joe. "The lore you say about a thing like that the orse it is!"

How to Dress shionably Every woman wishes to be well dressed Her age is no bar to this desire. Her form does not prohibit this commendable am-bition. As an aid to the consummation of this wish, the fashion plates and stories in The Boston Sunday Herald have neither a peer in style nor an equal in practibility. The active principle upon which these unique fashions are designed is becomingness. They range from the suit or gown suited to the slight "coming out" girl to the matron, whose embonpoint tells the story of advancing care. story of advancing years. They are designed to adorn living figures, not the in-animate models of the French tashion plate. In them you see living, moving people who are inhabited in the latest wrinkles of Dame Fashion's decree. We are told that so simple are these gowns. are told that so simple are these gowns, that any experienced dressmaker can con-struct them, maintaining all the details of the original designs. How to be Healthy in Winter. Winter is a trying time for delicate people. Coughs, colds and pneumonia find them easy victims.

Do you catch cold easily? It shows that your system is not in a condition to resist disease. You will be fortunate if you escape pneumonia. monia.

Nature is always fighting against disease. The right kind of medicine is the kind that helps Nature by toning up the system and enabling it to resist disease. Such a tonic is found in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. By building up the blood and strengthening the nerves these pills reach the root of many serious diseases, such as sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism and all forms of weakness, either in men or women. Miss Pearl Wood, a popular young lady of Arlington, Ind., says: "I had fairly good health until two years ago, when facial neuralgia developed. The pain was fearful. Frequently I would have severe attacks during the night, making it impossible to ever get a night's rest. I suffered severly from this disease for many weeks. Our physician was unable to help me, and with the cooled, but with the same result. I used different remedies, but with the same result. I used different remedies, but with the same result. The program given at the M. E. church last Sunday evening on behalf of the Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education society, was a success in every way.

The speaker, Rev. John Jedekish Smyer, with his wonderful eloquence, moved the audience at his will. He is a well-educated young man and a gifted orator. His address was eloquent and timely. He is an honor to his race. The audience responded with a liberal offering to this worthy cause.

The scene of the play is located in Ireland with a liberal offering to this worthy cause, and could not refrain from expressing their appreciation of his address, by hearty se. May the number of such young en of the negro race be greatly increased.

ach? Constipation? These things arise from Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

Digestion depends on digestive fluids or ferments' secreted by certain glands. When the secretion becomes insufficient, Indigestion results. Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People cause these glands to resume their normal action and good digestion follows.

Artificial ferments (of which most so-called Dyspepsia cures are composed) may give temporary relief, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People afford a permanent cure.

Poor digestion often causes irregularity of the heart's action. This irregularity may be mistaken for real, organic heart disease. There are some of our citizens who would be glad to give something to a worthy person who might be saffering extreme want, but often they fear deception and tighten their purse strings when appealed to in cases where there is rpal need because they have been imposed upon before. The Gazette has had an instance brought to its motice that we know is worthy of attention and if there are people among our readers who would like to aid a helpless old gentleman with small sums, the Gazette will receive and acknowledge the receipt of the contributions and will see that the money is given to the party. The case is that of an old gentleman who has been a life-long resident and a hard working man, who now is beyond work and has no one to take care of him. He does not want to spend his last few days at the alms house where of course he can go. A little money will go a long way with him. The Gazette will lead the subscription with its small contribution.

Why Nantasket Beach should be made a part of the Metropolitan Park System.

1. Its situation and natural characteristics make it the fluest beach in the Comman who has been so conspicuous on our man who has been so conspicuous on the temperance question last sunday but it was unfortunate that the weather was such as to keep many at the sunday but it was unfortunate that the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as to keep many at the weather was such as the weather was such a monwealth.

(a) It is situated on a narrow strip of land with the sea on one side and inland bays on the other. The air is refreshing in summer because the wind, whichever way it blows, is cooled by coming over the water.

(c) The bathing is good at all stages of the tide, and is exceptionally safe.

2. This beach has been, for many years, a popular resort, more popular and more it frequented than any other beach. With the possible exception of Revere Beach, it since its improvement by the Matropolitan Park Commission, it is still the most frequented, both by people in the metropolitan district, and from other portions of the state, and by visitors from other states.

3. The character of the beach, as a clean and wholesome public resort, would be improved if it were controlled and regulated by the board of park commissioners. The proof of this is found in the improved character and increased popularity of Revere Beach.

4. The beach is easily accessible, especially to people in Boston and in the souther protion of the metropolitan district, (a) By the N.Y., N. H. & H. R. R. (b) By the trolley lines, (c) By carriage and bicycle, (d) By regular steamboat lines, (e) It is the only public beach of any size so easily reached by a on many means.

(b) By the trolley lines,
(c) By carriage and bicycle,
(d) By regular steamboat lines,
(e) It is the only public beach of any size so easily reached by so many means.
5. The taking of this beach was included in the original plan of the commissioners.
No less reason exists for taking it now than existed then. There is nothing in the reports of the commissioners to show that they are less favorable to the project now.

6. The amount of sea coast in the reservice, are led as follows: Classy.

6. The amount of sea coast in the reservations held by the commission is disproportionately small as compared with the amount of forest, park and boulevard, despecially in view of the fact that the district adjoins the coast.

(a) Revere Beach is the only beach now held by the commission.

(b) Kings Beach in Swampscott, small and procured at small expense, has been turned over to the park commissioners of that town.

7. The landscape architects say in their last report, 1889: "We regard it as very desirable that the southern half of the district should be provided with a shore reservation."

8. There is no other matter and the reservation of the commission of the commission of the commissioners of the commissioners of the commissioners of the commission o

Mrs. Drew's solos, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," by Harris and "Let not Your Heart be Troubled," by Chadwick, were rendered in a superb manner.

At the M. E. church, East Braintree, Wednesday evening, March 22, 1899, Mr. W. W. Lucas, A. B., the famous impersonrendered in a superb manner.

A pleasing feature of the programme was a tenor solo by Mr. Byrne who sang "Fear Not Ye O Israel," by Buck, in a very finished style. Mr. Albert Horton, corneter, rendered "The Lost Chord" beautifully, and the artistic organ accompaniment of Mr. Dow, made this selection particularly pleasing. A large congregation was in attendance.

Funeral of George W. White.

W. Mucas, A. B., the famous impersonment on the superbolic place of the South, will appear. Being a native Southern Negro he can most perfectly illustrate or the manner of the Southern Negro. He comes with the highest recommendations as a talented and eloquent reciter and clean entertainer. Some of his selections are "When Malinda Sings," "Meriky's Conversion," "Dat Party," "Origin of the Watermelon," "An Antebellum Sermon," etc.

And yet, is it not time that with all our glee and gratitude that we are town citizens rather than city serfs, there are serious difficulties which beset and hinder the exercise of our citizenship in town meeting as well as leisewhere? Let some of these difficulties be indicated.

In a been amicted with redundation of fourteen years and nothing seemed to give any relief. I was able to be around all the time, but constantly suffering. I had tried everything I could hear of and at least was told to try Chamberlain's Pain last was told to try Chamberlain's Pain

First, there are too many of us. In last Balm, which I did, and was immediately Monday's election nearly two thousand votes were cast, while, as I am told, some 700 did not vote at all. Our town meeting theory is that all of these voters should tomorrow be together in one place for the transaction of town business. But no room in town is able to seat the half of the comparation of the comparati George M. Hoyt, East Weymouth. Jos. St. John. Cohasset. C. E. West, Nantasket. D. J. Therefore, is not Mr. Bryce right when he specifically indicates that under such circumstances there is no opportunity for calm and thorough discussion, but, on the other hand, abundant opportunity for obbery, actual fraud and the breeding of serious discontent? We should remember tha seeming obstinacy may arise from pain fear, or irritation of which we do not per ceive the cause, but which may be soothe by quiet patience.

The question of numbers is a serious one. And then there is the second difficulty which arises from lack of intelligence in town affairs as a whole. The emphasis is here on the phrase "as a whole," "intelligence as to town affairs as a whole." The citizens of Weymouth are Don't clip horses to be used for slow driving or business purposes. A horse com-pelled to go slow or stand still at times should have nature's coat to keep it warm by no means an ignorant people; and yet, show fragmentary and limited the knowl-edge of many as to town affairs. Is there having read the report and warrant, who While there is no great fertilizing prope ies in coal ashes, they are certainly well worth saving. If used on dry land the has carefully balanced to has a sked himself thoughtfully as to their relative and combined importance?

And then, closely allied to this question And then closely allied to this question on heavy soil they will lighten it up, putting it into much better condition for plant roots.

And then, closely affined to this question of intelligence or lack of intelligence as to town meeting matters, is the third difficulty of selfishness. Is it not true that many citizens go to town meeting anxious and determined for some one thing, and getting that at whatever cost to the town care practically nothing for the other articles in the swarrant? Perhaps the thing man who tomorrow or at any time should attempt to control State affairs from purely religious vantage point. And yet, is it not true that the spirit of morality and even religion ought to be so influential with us that we shall be as orderly, as self-respecting and as 'courteous to others in town in meeting tomorrow as we are in God's try. By the census of 1895 it may be seen Though Massachusetts is a manufactur-ing and as 'courtecus to others in town meeting tomorrow as we are in God's house tonight? Indeed, may we not prop-irly and profitably go so religiousts. rely and profitably go so religiously far as to open our town meeting with a repetition of the Lord's Prayer—that prayer dear alike to Catholics and Protestants, and in the repetition of which I had the privilege

Written for This Paper.

The noonday session of the "Out-o'-Whack" club had been called to order by the president, the foreman of the composing room. In addition to the president there were the usual members present, consisting of the artist, the engraver, the electrotyper, the foreman of the press room and the editor.

In a few appropriate words the president intimated that it was the press room foreand the editor.

In a few appropriate words the president intimated that it was the press room foreman's "move." The usual story was forthcoming without further comment.

"My little tale for to-day shall be of an incident in life which I have not only seen but participated in," began the press room foreman. "It concerns a good German friend of mine, his wife and myself particularly, although there are other characters in the story. In fact, if it were not for the other characters there would be no story to tell.

"As you know I have been in the habit of spending a few weeks each spring in Florida, and on these excursions to the land of oranges and flowers I have for the past five years been accompanied by this German friend, whom I will designate by his first name, Fritz. Fritz' trips to the south with me had always been a bone of contention between himself and his wife because she thought she ought to go too. But Fritz had insisted that it was impossible for both to go and that they were necessary to him to be the past the give.

"We were sitting in the park of one of the little cities we were visiting when a lady and gentleman, accompanied by a small dog, came into the park and took a seat near us. The gentlemen carried a camera, and after the lady and her pet were comfortably seated he began focusing the picture machine on her and the dog. My German friend noticed the operation, and in a joking way called to the gentleman:

"Meinfriendt, just turn those gun around this way."

"Mary I knew was his wife, to he ways called her by that name, and I inquired what was the trouble with her.

Greatest Hit in Boston Stage History. Viola Allen is meeting with the greatest success ever scored in Boston stage-history in Hall Caine's wonderful play, "The Christian," at the Boston Museum. The receipts for her first week, ending March 11th, were $12,870, and for her second week, ending March 18th, $13,381. If lack of patronage of a theatrical production indicates failure, such phenomenal receipts must be accepted as proof of success and remarkable public interest. Miss Allen's remarkable public interest. Miss Allen's third week is very likely to show a further increase. Her advance sale, too, shows no sign of falling off. Seats being on sale for all performances in the next four weeks gives everyone on opportunity to secure desirable places.

Miss Allen is making the record, too, of the largest suburban patronage ever enjoyed by a star playing in Boston. Treasure Lothian of the Boston Museum receives many letters each day, from all over New England, ordering seats. Church people and clergymen are among her most liberal patrons. As an attraction to people of religious profession, "The Christian' is a second "Lucke Tom's Cabin." Miss Allen will not play Friday evening, the lists. Just ninety years ago, dear friend, Your pilgrimage on earth began. You were but a tiny infant then, But now you are a grand old man.

In looking backward on your past, Through all its many changing years Through all its many changing years, So frought with days of pleasant che And only hours of griet and tears,

You can but feel that on the whole Your life has been a grand success, Filled in with years of health and strength, While those of weakness have been less. Surrounded, ever, by dear friends
To aid and cheer you on your way,
Through the grim shadows of the night,
And all the sunlit hours of day.

Sometimes, above your head, have hung Clouds of grim darkness, bleak and cold. But a radiant, silver lining Ever hung beneath each murky fold.

Through all your long eventful life In every spot your feet have trod. You've stood erect, an honest man. The grandest, "noblest work of God." I seem to see now gathered round you, A band of spirits fair and bright, Shedding on your earthly pathway, A flood of pure, transcendent light.

kept many away but over 150 persons sat down to supper at 7 o'clock. Roast turkey cold ham, baked beans, rolls, coffee, cake, pie and plum pudding made up the menu which was enjoyed by all. Following the supper miscellaneous entertainment was given by the church choir, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond, Miss Annie Deane, H. H. Joy and Miss Edith Burrell. This affair was managed by Capt. C. W. Hastings and a large corps of assistance. Too much credit cannot be given to Mr. Hastings for the way the affair was managed and it is safe to say, that had the weather been fair the church vestry would not have accommodated all who would have attended these ever popular suppers.

"Never mind Gregory," said his friend; "sling your blankets in behind and making everyone wish he week dead. For, of course, nothing was right. He was the kind of boss who will go into matters with a storekeeper, and, finding half an ounce of tea short, dock the responsible man. And if it was half an ounce over he would slate him for subting the hands. And get he was and jump up and drive me. I hire you right now." And Jack climbed in.

And so they came up to Myall. Almost the first man they met was Gregory, who had come in with his black horse foaming. He saw the boundary "What are you doing here?" he tle rough old chap, riding a beast of a broken-down crock not worth a panni-

The laws governing marriage, divorce and the in dividual property rights of married women have been pronounced sub-versive of a high social state time and time again. Now, interstate extradi-tion laws have been found to be wholly inadequate in a sensational case of wide interest. A woman in California was charged with having sent a quantity of poisoned candy to a family in Delaware, which caused the death of two persons who partook of it. Under the laws of an who deliberately sent the candy on its mission of death can be punished a all for the horrible act. In California it is held that death occurred not there. but in Delaware, and that punishment can only be inflicted at the place where the crime was consummated. In Delaware it is held that the extradition laws only warrant the return of a per-son to a state from where he or she has fled after a crime. The criminal, in therefore cannot be extradited thither.

HINTS TO FARMERS.

It is a shame and a disgrace that any on should half-starve a horse and then try to get full work out of him. 111

No horse should wear a shoe more the four weeks. Horses sometimes "feel sick," (as you do) and should be favored. A deep, moist clay soil is the best for cauliflowers, although good crops can b raised on any good garden soil. Competent drivers use the whip but rarely 111 Cucumbers generally do well, even if con ditions are only moderately favorable, though it is better to plant them in a deep, rich and somewhat retentive loam, the planting to be done as soon as the ground becomes warm in the spring.

Word ashes should not be thrown in th oultry yard. The alkali which comes from hem'destroys the color of the legs, and often nakes them sore, and also injures the luster

The curious fact that corn, potatoes an other plants thrive better when placed in rows running north and south has now been proved. Planted thus, they obtain more iniform and regular light.

The dwellings of animals should, when ever it is possible, have a southerly of westerly aspect, as exposure to north of east wind is very fatal to them. But while their position should be sunny, they should always have access to shelter and shad when they desire it. 111

The poorest sandy soil is the best for fowls, not that such I and provides grass (though it will give some kind of green food) but because on such land gapes, cholera and other diseases seldom appear. The rich soil, abounding in humus, is the kind of 441 Any fool can ruin a team, but a wise river maintains its value. To whip a horse, instead of his driver, for "cussedness is a great mistake. The best drivers talk much to their animals. You should praise your horse and give him apples, candy, etc.,

Yelling and jerking the bit confuse orse and advertise a blockhead. Kicking or beating a horse is barbarous, silly and inexcusable. You should treat your horse as u would be treated were you a horse. 111 Broken down fences are a temptation to stock to become breachy, and expose crops to the danger of being injured by cattle and horses. To permit such things is not the way that the careful business men make a success of their business. They achieve success by attention to the smallest detail and by keeping this stabilishment. detail, and by keeping their establishment in every part up to a high standard of con

All food should be fresh and of good quality. Where the times of feeding are not regulated by practice, nor specified in detail by manuals, food should be kept always within reach, but every day what is left and stale should be carefully removed, and fresh supplies offered. Milk especially should be quite fresh, and always boiled be-

As a rule, give as much solid food daily as the animal will babitually eat up clean; green stuff, etc., may be given in addition. The food should be varied, and resemble as much as possible that which the creatur would select in its natural state. 111

Frequent kind and cheerful notice is es-sential to the well-being of all animals in captivity. It is selfish and cruel to imprison and so deprive them of variety, excreise and the society of their own kind, and give no compensation, such as gentle talk, caressing, and amusement, whenever it is possible. If this is too much trouble, it is better not o keep them at all. 111

Farmyard manure should be kept as near the surface of the soil as possible. The rainwater as it percolates through the soil has a tendency to carry the soluble plant food downward and out of the reach of plants. Consequently an attempt should be made to delay the downward progress o plant food instead of assisting it by plow ing the manure in deeply.

111 Much of the success of the garden depends on starting plants early in the hot bed and cold frame, so it is well to begin to plan for them now so the seeds may be sown at the earliest possible moment. Often in this climate the hot bed can be in use by March 15th, and there is considerable work to be done before it is ready for use.

Reducing sod land is difficult unless the neducing sod iand is diment unless the proper crop is grown thereon. When a heavy sod is turned under by the plow it may not rot for a long time, because the grass will grow again and take possession. It will not do to broadcast seed upon such land, as the grass will crowd out all othe plants. The best plan is to cut up the land with a disc harrow in the spring if the land is plowed in the fall, and plant early pota-toes on the location. 111

When opening hives and handling bees always stand at the side or behind the hive, and never in front of it. Bees do not like any obstruction in their regular line of travel, and will give you notice of the fact sooner or later. Avoid all quick motions, sooner or later. Avoid all quies motion, and never strike at a beel it it should be flying about your head in a threating manuer, for it is just waiting for you to strike first, and not once in fifty times will it make the first assault. 111

There is no eazier vegetable to grow that the asparagus beds, when ouce established If properly hended yield more and pay betfer each season. As a long distance shipping vegetables it ranks among the very best. The plain truth is this—it makes noney for the grower, yields a profit for the middleman, and most of all, pleases the

It is worth while to make the life attract ive and the toil remunerative, Much can be done in this way by encouraging the boys to reep up with the litest agricultural thought. The ablest minds of the country are giving their labors to agricultural sci-ence and contributing to its literature, and are having a practial effect upon the farm work of the country. Unless the boy reads work of the country, Unless the boy reads he will be a century behind when he him self becomes the manager of the farm. 111

It is absolutely necessary fol health and It is absolutely necessary for health and comfort that in every case the dwelling, yard, cage, and bed, should be kept thoroughly clean, to dastroy vermin, prevent smell, and also the retention of stale, and therefore unwholesome, food. This should be done early in the morning, to avoid hindrance and interruption, and because it is better for the animal to have fresh food and water than that which has been kept in a close dwelling all night. Feed nocturnal animals at sunset.

The party of botanists was under the im-mendiate supervision of Dr. P. A. Rydmendate supervision of Dr. P. A. Ryd-berg, and its expenses were paid by William E. Dodge. After a search of three months it brought back to New York 15,000 specimens. Most of these were specimens of flowers, shrubs, trees and seeds already well known, and classified by scientists, says the New York Sun. New York Sun

But there was one species found hith-erto unknown to botany. This was the smallest willow tree extant anywhere in the world. It is only an inch and a half high, and was found by Dr. Rydberg on the summit of the Bridger mountains in Montana.

"This species," said Prof. N. L. Britton, of Columbia university, and director-in-chief of the New York botanical garden, "is entirely new to us. It is the very smallest willow tree to be found anywhere, and flourishes to some extent on the Bridger mountains. Its pigmy height is due to the extreme ex program regards due to the extreme ex-posure of the mountain top. We can-not plant it here, as weather conditions would quickly kill it off, but a number of preserved specimens will be ex-hibited in the botanical museum in the Bronx, when that building is con pleted next summer."

WAR IS LIFE. Makes Business for the Builders of Great Ships That Go

War may be "hell," but there are va-cious enterprises which depend entire-y upon its existence, says the Cincin nati Enquirer. After the manufaturers of war materials the shipbuild ers are most happy over international contentions. In these days of commer-cial enterprise, when every great na-tion has its trading fleet, as well as its fighting ships, the risk run owing to the necessities of obtaining supplies abroad are enormous. The scouring of the seas by a hostile fleet, the sinking and capture of ships so diminish the number of vessels on the seas that no industry outside of that which provides war materials is so active. The dockyards in time of war are kept in a state of incessant activity, and every shipbuilding yard in the land is in fu suppositing yard in the land is in this work, seeking to perform the almost impossible task of keeping pace with the wear and tear of war time among the sea-going craft. Police Constable Dale, of the Leam roice Constante Date, of the Lean-ington (England) force, has a kind heart, and he has found that kindness pays, says the London Sketch. In Jan-uary of the past year he saw one day a sad sight in the streets—a poor, emaciated and most miserable-looking spaniel being dragged along, tied to the back of a dust cart. He not only pitied the poor animal, but came to his res-cue. After ascertaining from the dustman that the dog had been given to him man that the dog had been given to him by a lady who wanted to get rid of it, and who certainly must have been without a particle of womanliness or humanity, Dale purchased the dog for a shilling. In 1810 there were two ship yards there, where many vessels had been built, and much other business. The people were ambitious. They lived some distance from the Meeting Houses in Weymouth, North Braintree and Quincy. March 13, 1810, forty-three persons associated themselves together for the purpose of organizing a new Parish. The same day they voted to buy the old Meeting House of the Hollis Street Church in Boston. March 21 it was voted to erect the house on the site which it occupied for so many years.

ing at Weymouth Baptist Church.] Thy wondrous open tomb Dispels all earthly gloom, Great Son of God; For this rapt vision bright, Our soul's supreme delight, For Easter's holy light, Thy name we laud.

The angel rolled away
The stone guarding the way,
With Roman seal;
From death's cold shades was born,
This resurrection morn, Our Saviour's glorious form, Life to reveal.

Like Him the saints shall be in gracious majesty, in life and power; For each a crown and throne. And glory vast unknown, Nor sigh nor tear nor groan, Shall blight that hour.

This Easter Sabbath day, We most devoutly pray, That Christ shall be Mid scenes with evil rife, Our resurrection life, Our strength for daily strife, Our victory.

Oh mighty angel throng, Join in our rapturous song And swell the praise To Him who died for us, And rose victorious, Our King noost glorious, Through endless days.

Keith's Theatre.

In the days when Hallen and Hart were scoring tremendous success in "Later On," and its successors, much of their vogue was due to the individual work of Joseph Hart, a fact which has been plainly demontrated since Mr. Hart went into vaudeville company with his clever wife, Carrie De in company with his clever wife, Carrie De Mar. The couple have ranked among the most successful of the recruits from the legitimate and have been steadily gaining in popularity. They are the headliners at Keith's for the week of April 3, presenting Mr. Hart's latest sketch, "Dr. Chauncey's Visit." There is not much to thepiece, and what they is departed by the control of the co what there is depends largely on Mr. Hart and Miss DeMar. It combines opportuni-ties for singing and dancing; with an interest maze of complications, and moves with a rush from start to finish. Carrie De Mar, is a rare combination of grace, beauty and cleverness, and is in the very front ranks of the souherttes of the present time. Mr. Hart is too well-known to Bos-ton theatregoers to need any sulogy. The songs are new and the dancing exception ally good, and altogether it is a bit which nent seekers cannot afford to misamusement seeers cannot afford to miss.

The first annual dinner of the South Weymouth Veteran Firemen's Association was held in Engine hall, South Weymouth last evening, at which were present about orty members and invited guests. This association was formed sometime in the fall of 1888, soon after the purchase of the old Conqueror hand engine from the own of Colby, N. H., and has for officers: . B. Nevin, president; Gordon Willis and J. C. Howe, vice presidents; W. B.

Loud, secretary and treasurer.

At eight o'clock the committee sat down o a fine spread consisting of rolls, escal-oped oysters, cold ham and tongue, cake, sie and coffee. The engineers of the town and also the captains of the several companies were the nvited guests of the evening and sat on As was natural at a gathering of this and the talk tended toward hand engines known artists. The company assembled around the piano and passed the remainder of the evening singing college songs.

While this association is at present small the members have hopes of adding a large number before the coming season. There is no reason why this association should not increase. It is the only one of the kind to get a large number of members from the other wards and an invitation is hereby extended for all who would like to become extended for all who would like to become members. The cost is small and there are opportunities for many a good time during the summer and fall seasons.

The Jones Perkins School Association

Holds a Novel Entertainment. The Jonas Perkins School Association the chief feature. The oranges were sold a five cents each, and a suitable present was given free with each orange. This unique invention originated with Mrs. Carrie F. Loring and the association is indebted to her for the grand success which followed. The sale of oranges was preceeded by the laughable farce entitled "Rubber Boots" which was presented by Misses Dora M. Miller and Ida Rateliffe, Mrs. C. O. Miller and Harry Vinton, each one of whom deserves great credit for their respective impersonations. The next num-ber needs no introduction as the previous presentation of it will long be remembere as Cronin and Perry's original comedy sketch entitled "Where are we at? This is one of the best hits ever given in this vicinity. Perry as a coon cannot be dupli cated on the Amatuer stage. Cronin also acquitted himself most creditably in his roll of judge. The admission charged was five cents and the hall was filled to overdowing.

QUEENLY EVEN IN PRISON. Antoinette.

The author of "Foreign Courts and Foreign Homes," relates a very pathetic story of Marie Antoinette, told to her by an old man who had, when a boy, during the days of the terror, to take some water daily into the room of the unhappy queen. The boy did not know the rank of the prisoner, as she was spoken of as Yeuve Capet, and her daughter as Citoyenne Marie! The first time he was gruffly told by his uncle to put the pitcher down. THEIR LOVE TOKENS.

What if the skies are skies of gray,
And snow lies in the hollows?
This is the day, when glad and gay,
Love on love's errands follows.
I'll sins to thee in happy rhyme,
While bird to mate is singing:
No truer lay brings heart to-day,
Than mine to thee is bringing:
I'lt might be a better valentine.

It was the first St. Valentine's day tha had come, too, into the Ratcliffe's wedded life. How a young husband must cherish such little tokens of a wife's esteem! But Joseph Ratcliffe was practical, at least he was not sentimental, and just now it would appear that he thought it proper to discourage any show of feeling; for when, after supper, they were scated before the glowing grate, with the little table and its lamp between them, he had first uttered a long drawn "hm!" then had said: "A valentine, is it?" And a little later, handing it to her, he said in a voice that he did not understand was unkind, but which seemed to sensitive cars too indifferent to be otherwise: "Read. it. I can't make out that kind of writing."

She read it. But the pleasure was gone.

it. I can't make out that kind of writing."

She read it. But the pleasure was gone.

At best, few enjoy reading aloud their own productions, but there are times and circumstances when in such performance all interest has ceased, and it has become simply an unwelcome task.

Somehow, a silence fell upon the two, and it remained there. Joseph sat and thought about his work, and the work of the hand, for the morrow, with plans shead for many a day, and Edith knitted quietly. He spoke once of the lateness of the hour, but his wife gave no answer; then he went out with once of the lateness of the hour, but in wife gave no answer; then he went out will no further remark, leaving her to wind the clock, see to the fire and fasten the doors as was her nightly habit. as was her nightly habit.

Because she had believed him sturdy and honest, with good sound sense, as well as affection for her. Edith had been first led to think of accepting the farmer who had invited her to share his fortunes. He had little education, and still less experience in the finer belongings of life, but she paid slight heed to such objections, supposing that improvement would begin and all faults cease under the influence that should be brought about when they were married. Now had come the first acknowledged showing of the little rift that spoiled, to one, the music of a lute. Instead of the appreciation of her little effort, and the tenderness she had a right to expect, there was an ignoring, a forgetting it, which was the harder to bear because it was almost too trivial to call attention to it. The verses left on the table, and the envelope which had fallen to the floor, Edith picked up and dropped into the open fire. And while she watched them burn, these broken sentences drifted through her mind: "He does not care! I did it to please him, and—I would better—I wish I had not—if I could but take all back!" and the rift had grown wider.

A time came—it was when several years had passed—that they had agreed to separate. She was to go away the next day, ostenishly on a long visit, but they fhemselves knew that she would not come back, and he would hire a man with a family to remain in the house with him. It was the midding the final arrangements, touched a cord that more than woke the old, it brought about a new tenderness in the man's heart, and a stirred up all the unselfishness of Edith's.

"Will you put my cradle in the garret, fa. If so, you are famil

How could be refuse her anything now? er ride to the village was soon over, and their way down the street they went to a shop where gay devices peculiar to alentine's day were displayed on counter di in window. A pretty one, her own olice, was bought for Marie, and then, sen she was not looking, one was bought at had on it "roses and lilies and honey-ekle flowers" all framed about a pretty rse. What could have possessed the man, tless it was the picture he remembered of mother and little child? At home, Edith had been busy in putting vay the contents of a certain drawer—little stockings and sacques and dresses; and, she folded one of them, there came to her rid an awkward kindness of Joe's to arise and herself, and another she remembed baby had worn when her lips had effirst time formed the word "papa," "If only could have been what I dreamed love ould be," Edith said, with a sigh.

would be," Edith said, with a sigh.

Then sie heard feet coming up the stairs, and Joseph appeared at the door. "Where is Marie?" Edith asked, without looking up, for tears were in her eyes if they were not in her voice. In a moment the steps had crossed the room, and, conscious that something was being held toward her, she looked up to see the valentine—all flowers and loving words, and, somewhere, two joined hands.

showed very well that I did care for you. If you will try me again, I will be as good to you as I know how; and I will set about learning what I have been too dult to see."

And Edith—she knew he was a man of his word—had eyes running over with tears now, but they were for happiness. She took the love and the token offered by him who had had little to do with romance, and thought of the ill-fated valentine she had made and offered so long ago. But he? no, Joseph never thought of it.—Emma E. Volentins, in Good Housekeeping.

Ec Remesentative LEWIS P. LORING of Hull.

One of the most highly respected citizens of Hull is Ex-Repre sentative Lewis P. Loring, who a number of years ago figured conspicuously in the affairs of the town. He was born in Hull, July 10, 1822, and is therefore nearly 77 years old. His parents were Samuel and Lucy (nee Pratt) Loring, who descended from the carliest colonial He is the tenth lineal descendant of Elder William Brewster. the leading spiritual advisor of the Pilgrims. He is also a direct descendant of Thomas and Jane (nee Newton) Loring, who on their arrival in this country from England located at Dorchester, Mass They afterward moved to Hingham, Mass., where they drew a lot or Town street. Thomas Loring was made a freeman in 1634 and about 1635, with his family, became a resident of Hull; thus the family has been located in Hull for 264 years. He was the progenitor of the subject of this sketch in America. On his mother's side he is a descendant of Matthew Pratt, one of the first settlers of Weymouth, his mother of Matthew Pratt, one of the first settlers of weymouth, his mother being Lucy, daughter of Laban and Lucy Pratt. His father, Samuel Loring, Jr., died November 9, 1868, aged 84. His mother died in 1871, in the 85th year of her age. Of three brothers, Abner, Sam-uel H., and Ansel P., and four sisters, Lucy, Nancy, Sarah J., and Rachel, only Lucy and Nancy, the latter being the widow of Robert Gould, are alive, and they, with Lewis P., are occupants of the old omestead, one of the oldest houses in the town.

Mr. Loring was educated in the public schools; when a young man he learned the trade of coppersmith and plumber, a business two of his brothers successfully pursued for many years in Boston. In 1850 he returned to Hull, where he has since remained. Originally a whig, he returned to Hull, where he has since remained. since the organization of the Republican party, he has been one of its staunchest supporters. He has filled a number of important offices

And it is true that the tery qualities most dreaded were often those we now admire, and those we most dislike were held in high esteem.

Above all, it used to be assumed, it was desirable that everything—everything should "come out clear." Softness of effect was a thing to be althorred.
One lady, whose family cherished the tustom of having the children's pictures sustom of having the children's pictures taken every two years, recalls vividly the length, the solemnity and the elaboration of her childish sittings in a famous New York studio, and especially the care bestowed upon her toilet.

Her dress for the occasion consisted year after year, of a large black and white check, chosen because black and white was supposed to "come out" more effectively than anything else. It did indeed! She can now display a series of childish portraits in every one of which she is arrayed in a frock about
